Claims 1-7,9 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over either Cave or Miyamoto.

Both Cave (fig. 1) and Miyamoto (fig. 4) teach the use of providing characters, marks or patterns on a seat belt. Note that the belt with such indicia may be readily grasped and would inherently prevent or at least lessen to some degree, slippage out of a users grasp due to nature thereof. The material of the seat belt is considered a matter of design choice, as is the type of material of the characters or marks, and the manner in which they are applied to the seat belt.

Note that in an article claim, the certain material of an element is given little patentable weight, as is the method by which a structure is made.

Applicant's arguments filed December 18, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

As set forth in the above rejection, the patents to Cave and Miyamoto show "structure" substantially as claimed. While the purposes of the patterns on the belts of the prior art may be different than that of the applicant, the structure is similar, and would even appear to meet the function that is claimed, that is, provide a raised surface to the belt which would inherently help in preventing slipping when grasped by a user. Note that the location of such patterns has not been precisely set forth in the claims, and it is the examiner's contention that a user may grip the belt at any location to facilitate putting on or taking off the belt.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Peter R. Brown whose telephone number is 703-308-2103.
